

Global Issues

Virtual Conference

Worldwide, April 1st to 8th 2019

Call for Papers

The 4th Global Issues Conference will build on the success of the previous events.

GIC4 will be open to students and instructors from the GPE organization.

The conference is aimed receiving original presentations that explore the interconnected nature of the global arena today and encourage the sharing of local opinions. Global Issues Conference 4 will facilitate discussions on a wide range of topics which impact people across the globe.

Conference Format

During the weeklong virtual conference, there will be multiple sessions covering topics which have an impact across the globe. The conference will operate online and enable faculty and students to participate in the thematic sessions. Each session will be chaired by a faculty member of the GPE organisation and include presentations from various institutions giving a truly global perspective on the topics.

Presentations should be no more than 15 minutes in length and given in English.

Selected presentations will be published in a special edition of the GPEJ.

Call for Participation

As the GPE encompasses a wide range of academic disciplines and interests, the session topics provide a global perspective. We encourage presenters to deliver original presentations based on research and following academic standards.

The GIC4 asks for presentations on the following topics:

- International Business and Economics
- Global Environmental Issues
- World Health Issues
- Global Education and/or Methodology
- Global English and Global Communication
- International Politics
- Global Social Challenges
- Global Popular Culture

Guidelines for Presenters

- Your presentation should be based on research that interests you
- Find a suitable topic which fits the themes of the conference
- Search for information in your library or on the internet
- Create a thesis statement which explains your main idea, informs the reader what the presentation will talk about and makes a statement which your work will defend or explain
- Decide how you will explore your thesis: Will you use material from other books and articles to explain your idea? Or will you create a survey or observational study to collect information?
- At the end, give a conclusion about what you have found and how it connects to your thesis
